Mother of Invention

Mother of Invention Sharon Wright
Following my much publicised success on the BBC2 PROGRAM “Dragons Den” in July 2009 with my award winning cable threading invention, I have written an explosive book documenting the series of unexpected setbacks I have encountered since the show.

“Mother of Invention” – How I won Dragons Den, Lost my mind, Nearly lost my business and ended up reinventing myself published September 26th 2010, is a heartfelt expose that documents my personal struggle as a single mother, inventor and entrepreneur.

As a regular monthly contributor to “Raw Business” a magazine for entrepreneurs, I am often featured in women's magazines and invited for interviews on TV and radio as I am now a well known role model for aspiring entrepreneurs. However, the real story behind my amazing accomplishments has never been revealed until now.

“People will be amazed by what happened to me after the program. They might imagine that I was handed opportunities on a plate and received the support that I needed but the reality was far different”.
