A new guide for doctors preparing to take the DO-HNS/MRCS (ENT) OSCE Examination is being hailed as “excellent” and “invaluable”.
The lavishly-illustrated book is divided into two sections to mirror the real examination: unmanned (noninteractive) and manned (interactive) stations. A myriad of questions similar, but not identical, to those used in the actual examination is presented, with some of them deliberately raising the bar, in order to stimulate learning at the next level.
Clear succinct answers are provided, along with visually-enhanced revision notes to improve understanding of key concepts and to boost confidence whilst preparing for the final hurdle. Ricardo Persaud, who earlier co-authored Otolaryngology ST3 Interview Guide for National Selection, was actually involved in the original pilot mock DO-HNS OSCE Examination in 2003 at the Royal College of Surgeons of England, as a LAT Registrar, and has followed the changes in the exam ever since.
Both he and co-author Professor Pau are Consultant ENT Surgeons with considerable experience in ‘separating the wheat from the chaff’ when it comes to teaching and writing.
“We were asked to write a guide containing strategies and vital core ENT information relevant to every section of the examination,” explains Mr Persaud.
“This book is therefore written as an examination revision tool covering all aspects of the examination, rather than an ENT textbook.
“We believe that we have succeeded in producing the most comprehensive up-todate revision guide to optimize your chance of securing the DO-HNS or MRCS (ENT) diploma.”
This book is invaluable not only to those studying for DO-HNS/MRCS (ENT) diplomas, but also other ENT trainees in the UK and abroad who desire a quantum leap in their understanding of the fundamental principles of Otolaryngology. Consultant ENT Surgeons may also find it helpful to update their theoretical knowledge of Otolaryngology and the format of the DO-HNS OSCE examination.
